The ninth Asian Conference on Computer Vision will be held in Sep. 23-27, 2009, in Xi'an. The topics of interest include, but are not restricted to, the following:

- Image and video search
- Learning and statistical methods
- Low-level vision
- Color, illumination and texture
- Object recognition
- Perceptual interfaces
- Physics-based vision
- Segmentation and grouping
- Motion and tracking
- Sensors and real-time/active vision
- Shape representation
- Stereo and motion
- Range data analysis
- Vision for graphics
- Vision systems
- Vision for robotics

Papers in the main technical program must describe original research. To encourage high quality submissions, various paper prizes will be awarded at the conference. The award-winning papers will be selected to appear in a future special issue of the International Journal of Computer Vision.

The conference also includes tutorials and workshops. The conference proceedings will be published by Springer in the Lecture Notes in Computer Science (LNCS) series.

Deadline

Paper Submission Deadline: Apr. 1, 2009

Notification of Acceptance: Jul. 15, 2009

Camera-Ready Papers: Aug. 15, 2009

About the conference venue

Xi'an is the capital of ShaanXi province in China and situated in central China, between the Weihe river in the north and the Qinling Mountains in the south. As one of the most important cities in Chinese history, Xi'an is one of the Four Great Ancient Capitals of China for it has been the capital of 13 dynasties, including the Zhou, Qin, Han, and the Tang. Xi'an is also renowned for being the eastern terminus of the Silk Road and for the location of the Terracotta Army from Qin Dynasty. The city has more than 3,100 years of history. It was called Chang'an in ancient times. Since 1990s, Xi'an has become an important cultural, industrial and educational center of the central-northwest region, with facilities for research and development, national security and China's space exploration programs.
